

Interfaces

I identified four primary interfaces:

- Homepage (landing page)
- Portfolio (landing page)
- Topic Page
- About Me

Rationale

I want to keep things as simple and clean cut as possible, which is why the Homepage and Portfolio landing pages contain no text, except for the title and what is on the linked buttons. This will, I hope, prevent anyone from lingering on what is ultimately the least important part of the site. People will be encouraged to dive right in and find my work.

My “About Me” page also conforms to this motif of simplicity, containing just my contact info, a biography, and a picture.

Each of the topic pages will be laid out as a list of projects or documents, with a picture, title, and short description. This will let people have some idea of what they are clicking on before they click, which should help people focus on what interests them in my work.